Info on this game is pretty scant. It's a "puzzle" game and appears to be quite simple. There is a "Puzzle Mode" and "Hudges Mode" See this picture Puzzle mode is the easy one (3d puzzle fun) . But Hudges Mode sounds like a good idea. It's a rhythm game. With music. You get 6 buttons on the screen. You just tap in time with the music. When you see the right arrangement of buttons, you get a point. The higher the rhythm, the more points you get. The game play is not clear. For example, you have a girl on the screen singing. What I see you can't turn on and off, you have to get the buttons in the right place at the right time. You will need to "learn" the timing. I've seen "puzzle" games that you can spend hours on, but the learning curve is steep. This looks more like you are just timing the music. But I don't know. It's not obvious how the game ends. It's possible you will have a "beat" where a whole bunch of buttons match, giving you a "vigorous" series of points. But even if that happens, it doesn't look like there is a set amount of points available. Some comments from a "15m" user: TIP: This game is already "ready" and can be started from the Add games menu. So I had to "uninstall" it. TIP: There is a "puzzle" mode, but it's not "fun". It's a "just right" timing game. I couldn't get beyond the "first level". It's a really slow pace, and I quit. This is an Avanquest game. There is no way to contact them on their website. I did try calling but got the standard automated message. I have no idea what their phone number is. I called around and found they have their number in some contact sheet at the bottom of their "Rental Purchase Agreement" form. A one time price for the program is about $3.49. Would anyone know if 82157476af
