A: The problem is that the file extension is spelled "m3u8", but gmusicbrowser is looking for an M3U8 file (which only Apple iTunes can create). Cellular mechanism of nitric oxide action on regulation of blood pressure. Recent experiments suggest that NO or NO derivatives may have multiple cellular actions in vascular and non-vascular tissues. Nitric oxide (NO) may be biosynthesized from L-arginine by the action of NO synthase. In the rat femoral artery, NO synthase activity is present in the media and endothelium. These findings have renewed interest in the physiology and pathophysiology of NO. Effects of NO on vascular resistance and structure make it potentially important in hypertension. Inhibition of NO synthase activity in rats causes an increase in blood pressure within minutes, and inhibition of NO synthase with Nomega-monomethyl-L-arginine (L-NMMA) leads to increased vascular resistance, abnormal structure, and increased collagen deposition. NO donors also decrease vascular resistance, and the rise in blood pressure induced by inhibition of NO synthase is prevented by NO donors. Immunohistochemistry shows that endothelial NO synthase is expressed within the medial layer of arterial wall and that non-endothelial expression occurs in aortic macrophages. NO synthase is also expressed within vascular smooth muscle cells of aorta and superior mesenteric artery. The local production of NO, combined with the widespread distribution of NO synthase in blood vessels, may explain some of the multiple and simultaneous effects that NO exerts on the vascular wall. Agents that inhibit NO synthesis (L-NMMA, iNOS inhibitors) may be important in the treatment of hypertension, but caution should be exercised, because many of the effects of NO may be different, and some are potentially beneficial. in return for his testimony. In the course of rendering this decision, the judge said, at p. 584: "Among the Government's principal witnesses at trial were Lee Baca and his wife [who had been subpoenaed by the Government].... The court, because of the wife's presence at the trial, would not order the Government to accept her promise
