The difficulty is that there is a guard at every level, which you must avoid otherwise when you touch him you break into fragments and lose. Also at each level there are red platforms, beware of them, because they also carry danger. But in order to quickly hide there are accelerations and teleports, use them, sometimes they will help to save the situation. English the style of this game is dark, and it feels very good, it feels real like walking through cold walls and the guard is looking for you somewhere. If you played the first game \(review\) and/or its sequel \(review\), 3rd game is, again, almost the same: short but ok'ish stealth puzzler.

Third instalment adds one more feature to the pre-programmed kill blocks and speed pads: teleports. It took me a while to learn it, but with 'space', you port to the tile and its cooldown begins.

A bit low on new features, I say, and still the same issues remain:

- Only 12 levels. After the first two games, it was a breeze and lasted 15 minutes.

- Progress bug is still there. Play it through in one \(probably short\) session.

- No native gamepad support. Only WASD controls exist.

On sale, it's almost fine. Having said that, 15 minutes is too short. It's not a bad game: I just can't recommend, when it adds so little to the original formula, it has the same unfixed bugs and it's over in a recess.

But if you liked the first two games, you can't go too wrong getting this one \(on sale of course\).

~Twistorian Curator~, Steam offered - I bought, why not?. interesting concept of the maze and spread, I have never seen this anywhere, like this series of games, I would like the new part to significantly expand the game, add a few guards, for example, or increase the map, any abilities would be cool
